York. Bootham. York is one of the walled cities. Built in many different periods since Roman days, they are mostly of the time of Edward III. To walk round the walls gives some of the best views of the glorious Minster. The city gates are called bars, and the streets leading to them are gates. Bootham Bar, where the city is entered from the north-west, is partly Norman. From here to Monk's Bar the walls follow two sides of the Roman city, Eboracum.
